Walk The World, at the Walt Disney World Resort, Florida

14 to 18 November 2013

For A Cause, introduces a first of its kind vacation that combines a visit to the world's most famous theme park and a walking vacation in one package.

Daily walking routes average 10 miles a day, before entering a theme park, on a series of interconnected sidewalks, all on property and all non-repeating.

These are probably the best-maintained walking paths you will ever have the privilege of walking on as you walk past manicured lawns, gardens, and flowering trees and bushes.

The registration fee for Walk The World is $995.00 per person and includes double occupancy lodging at Disney's Coronado Springs Resort, group meals, group transportation, group shows, and group entrance to theme parks.

Also included, walking guides, route maps, and airport transfers from Orlando International Airport.

For A Cause, will be pleased to consider press trip opportunities for Alliance writers on commission and will waive the registration fee for qualified writers for the November 14 - 18, 2013 trip.

News

Call on Mexico to ban use of wild animals as tourist photo 'props'

The use of wild animals, such as lion, jaguar and tiger cubs for tourist photo 'props' in resorts across Mexico should be outlawed to protect the animals, say three international wildlife charities.

Care for the Wild International, Born Free Foundation and the FAADA Foundation have united to petition the Mexican government to change the law following hundreds of complaints from tourists.

Visitors to Cancun and other resorts are often confronted by people with young, cute animals with which they can have a photograph taken – for a fee.

Some are told that the animals are 'orphans', and that the money will go towards their care – but this is often far from the truth.

Most of the animals will have been taken away from their mothers at birth, they may be drugged, mutilated – teeth and claws removed – exploited on a daily basis then faced with an uncertain future when they are too old for photographs.

To sign the petition visit : http://www.change.org/petitions/stop-the-abuse-of-animals-used-for-tourist-photos?utm_source=guides&utm_medium=email&utm_campaign=petition_target_tips.

Reasons to write about

Champagne- Ardenne and the WW1 Centenary

Best known for its sporting and outdoor activities, fine wines and historic cities of Reims, Troyes and Langres, Champagne-Ardenne, comprising the départements of Ardennes, Marne, Aube and Haut-Marne, has a large number of battle sites, museums, cemeteries and memorials.

While The Somme is synonymous with great battles involving British and Commonwealth troops, it's the Champagne-Ardenne region, where American, Russian and Portuguese troops fought alongside the French and whose sites are less-well known.

Vallée Moreau

Another location of interest is the German rest camp at the Vallée Moreau.

Here trenches, tunnels and buildings have been restored by the Franco German Committee when work began in 1966.

Other spots well worth a visit in Champagne-Ardenne include the Orientation Centre in Suippes and the chance to get an understanding of the battles and discover the human side of the conflict with film, photos, documents and military objects.

Near Reims is the Fort of La Pompelle built in 1880 as one of a ring of defence points for the city and the museum here houses a display of artillery and a collection of over 500 Imperial German Army helmets that is unique in the world.

Between Dormans and Reims, the British cemetery at Marfaux contains the graves of 1,114 British soldiers and 15 New Zealanders.

The historic City of Reims makes an excellent base from which to explore the WW1 sites.

Driving 'The Dempster', The Yukon, Canada

The Yukon has a network of well-maintained highways that rank among the world's premiere driving adventures offering stunning scenery, historic communities, cultural attractions and adventure outings.

The Dempster is Canada's only all-weather road across the Arctic Circle.

With services at both ends, and one lone outpost in the middle, this unpaved two lane highway is an original driving adventure. The isolation and variable conditions can prove challenging, but the abundant wildlife, easy access to the tundra and expansive views are unmatched.

The Yukon has almost 24 hours of 'daylight' during the Midnight Sun of summer.

The wildlife of the Chiltern Hills, UK

The Chiltern Hills were designated an Area of Outstanding Natural (AONB) in 1965 as one of the finest landscapes in England and Wales.

Large tracts of chalk grassland, or 'downland', are key landscape features with many of the plants found only in chalk grassland.

These include the Chiltern Gentian and chalk-loving Bee Orchid or the pretty-in-purple Pasqueflower which is now a very rare plant in the UK. This specialised habitat also supports a wide variety of animals, many of which need these specific chalk grassland plants in order to survive.

The Chalkhill blue butterfly can be spotted almost anywhere on Chilterns chalk downland. In 1989, Natural England and the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds launched a project to reintroduce the red kite back into England and Scotland.

The first successful breeding in the Chilterns took place in 1992, and since then numbers have steadily increased to approximately 400/500 breeding pairs.
